Yesterday, I saw a video on Instagram of an influencer killing a fish to feed a disabled crab in the wild. The crab had lost its legs and was found on the grass. Everyone in the comments cheered the influencer for being so empathetic and saving the crab's life. Unfortunately, I didn't see it that way. I know crabs eat fish in the wild, given that they can really hunt, but a human interfering in between two wild and freee beings didn't make sense to me. I also know that even tigers and other wild animals are fed meat in zoos and conservation parks. My question is: are we, as humans, deciding who gets to live? I bet there will also be some problems about buying stuff, not about money, but going out separately. Because I have no clue how to find out if something is a good vegetable or not).\n\nMy mom most definitely will ask me to cook my own stuff (which is valid. If she wouldn't force me to continue eating meat of course). A lot of people dislike spending time on stuff they don't like and I may sound like a child, but I don't even like going out with my friends if we're not doing something really useful or/and interesting for us. I also had some troubles with understanding the physical world around me and my body (for example: dislike washing my hair, don't understand whether I have to clean my ears, not notice those things in my eyes), so I guess it's going to be a problem too. I need the whole instruction and of course mom wouldn't give it to me. Another point is that my mom works in the kitchen and I wouldn't be able to go there and cook without her cooking something else or judging eyes. Often she would ask me something and if I did it wrong (though even if I asked how she'd refuse to say) she'd just go \"I'll do it myself\", so I'm also afraid I wouldn't learn (and one of the reasons why my brain can kinda give up on things). I don't have any friends that live close to try with them or any vegan friends in my country. \n\nI've already tried to learn cooking and I had an opportunity, but it'd be like five times a year? So basically nothing. And I would forget it really quickly. Even if I did write it down idk where it's now. Ik that we have internet for that, but following all instructions doesn't equal knowing how to cook. \n\nI heard that doing a lot of stuff at the weekends for later helps (and the possibility to make it fun). I'm asking for some recipes and maybe some sites with basic cooking and choosing food information. And ofc how to make cooking more interesting (I'd love to do it with friends, but no luck here. Probably make new ones, but my city is kinda small, so I barely found decent ones). Any other useful sites or documents are welcome (such as types of food to universally use). I bet there will also be some problems about buying stuff, not about money, but going out separately. Because I have no clue how to find out if something is a good vegetable or not).\n\nMy mom most definitely will ask me to cook my own stuff (which is valid. If she wouldn't force me to continue eating meat of course). A lot of people dislike spending time on stuff they don't like and I may sound like a child, but I don't even like going out with my friends if we're not doing something really useful or/and interesting for us. I also had some troubles with understanding the physical world around me and my body (for example: dislike washing my hair, don't understand whether I have to clean my ears, not notice those things in my eyes), so I guess it's going to be a problem too. I need the whole instruction and of course mom wouldn't give it to me. Another point is that my mom works in the kitchen and I wouldn't be able to go there and cook without her cooking something else or judging eyes. Often she would ask me something and if I did it wrong (though even if I asked how she'd refuse to say) she'd just go "I'll do it myself", so I'm also afraid I wouldn't learn (and one of the reasons why my brain can kinda give up on things). I don't have any friends that live close to try with them or any vegan friends in my country. \n\nI've already tried to learn cooking and I had an opportunity, but it'd be like five times a year? So basically nothing. And I would forget it really quickly. Even if I did write it down idk where it's now. Ik that we have internet for that, but following all instructions doesn't equal knowing how to cook. \n\nI heard that doing a lot of stuff at the weekends for later helps (and the possibility to make it fun). I'm asking for some recipes and maybe some sites with basic cooking and choosing food information. And ofc how to make cooking more interesting (I'd love to do it with friends, but no luck here. Probably make new ones, but my city is kinda small, so I barely found decent ones). Any other useful sites or documents are welcome

Something I noticed is that during the years 2020-2021, which was around the pandemic, there was a great hype and advertisement around veganism, and cafes were creating many vegan options and similar stuff. Now, it seems very clear that veganism has not taken over the world, and despite being staunchly angry at the very beginning because of the harm animals suffer from, I am feeling nihilistic now about the state of the world. A person at our table said they're fine eating meat because they've worked at a butcher's and in an abattoir and, anyway, they only get meat from locally-grown sources, so it's fine. (Not an original point, I know...) At this point, I grumpily snapped something like \"But the animal doesn't want to be killed!\", which immediately made everything awkward. The other people very quickly left and I later heard them talking to someone else about it. \n\n \nI clearly went too far and I know I shouldn't have reacted like this*, it's not that right that my outburst made everyone uncomfortable. I want to be able to respond in conversations like these in a serious, but non-aggressive, manner. Being realistic, I don't expect I'll actually be able to say anything to change people's minds, but I don't want to come across as some crazy vegan.\n\n \nThe whole point of this post is I'm looking for suggestions of people I can watch to see examples of people handling themselves in disagreements with non-vegans (I've heard Earthling Ed is a great example of this), so I can handle myself better. Also, if any of you know of any genuinely good responses, which don't make you seem like a complete ass, then I'm all ears for them too. \n\n \nTl;dr: How can I better respond in conversations about veganism/eating animals without losing it? Any good resources? \n\n

\n\n*The point of this post isn't to do with how we (as vegans) might not like other people (talking about) eating meat or defending it, nor is it about tiptoeing around other people's feelings. A person at our table said they're fine eating meat because they've worked at a butcher's and in an abattoir and, anyway, they only get meat from locally-grown sources, so it's fine. (Not an original point, I know...) At this point, I grumpily snapped something like "But the animal doesn't want to be killed!", which immediately made everything awkward. The other people very quickly left and I later heard them talking to someone else about it. \n\nI clearly went too far and I know I shouldn't have reacted like this*, it's not that right that my outburst made everyone uncomfortable. I want to be able to respond in conversations like these in a serious, but non-aggressive, manner. Being realistic, I don't expect I'll actually be able to say anything to change people's minds, but I don't want to come across as some crazy vegan.\n\nThe whole point of this post is I'm looking for suggestions of people I can watch to see examples of people handling themselves in disagreements with non-vegans (I've heard Earthling Ed is a great example of this), so I can handle myself better. Also, if any of you know of any genuinely good responses, which don't make you seem like a complete ass, then I'm all ears for them too. \n\nTl;dr: How can I better respond in conversations about veganism/eating animals without losing it? Any good resources? \n\n*The point of this post isn't to do with how we (as vegans) might not like other people (talking about) eating meat or defending it, nor is it about tiptoeing around other people's feelings. Of course, I'm sick of the BS reasons/mental gymnastics people do to avoid confronting the idea that eating animals is wrong, but I need to conduct myself better in conversations like these\n<!-- SC_ON -->", "likes": null, "suggested_sort": null, "banned_at_utc": null, "view_count": null, "archived": false, "no_follow": false, "is_crosspostable": true, "pinned": false, "over_18": false, "all_awardings": [], "awarders": [], "media_only": false, "can_gild": false, "spoiler": false, "locked": false, "author_flair_text": null, "treatment_tags": [], "visited": false, "removed_by": null, "num_reports": null, "distinguished": null, "subreddit_id": "t5_2qhpm", "author_is_blocked": false, "mod_reason_by": null, "removal_reason": null, "link_flair_background_color": "", "id": "1x4xh9p", "is_robot_indexable": true, "report_reasons": null, "author": "DownbeatSmile", "discussion_type": null, "num_comments": 77, "send_replies": true, "contest_mode": false, "mod_reports": [], "author_patreon_flair": false, "author_flair_text_color": null, "permalink": "/r/vegan/comments/1x4xh9p/advice_needed_how_to_handle_myself_better_in/", "stickied": false, "url": "https://www.reddit.com/r/vegan/comments/1x4xh9p/advice_needed_how_to_handle_myself_better_in/",
